Parrots are in many respects, no doubt, wonderful birds and to the many stories concerning Boihow them has to be added one from Mayfair. The particular bird in question was in the habit of Bolinao calling the footman who fed it " Jacko," and the correspondent of the Manafester Evening News. who tells the story, saye that by-and by the footmay left the cetablehment. Years passed and he was forgotten. One afternoon, however, the parrot suddenly startled the inmates of the house by muttering "Jacko" rapidly, and excitedly, as it were in his dresus. Someone had the curiosity to run to the window, and was just in time to see a carriage disappearing in the distappe, on whose box sat Jacko the footman, in Hongkong...... all the glory of powdered hair. The bird, who had never wen him in the guise before, must, it is alleged; have recognised him at once.

Up to the present time only four tunes have been played-The Old Hundred:h." " God Save the Queen." "Auld Laug Syne," and " The Roast Beef of Old England"—but the programme in future will be more extensive. The new chimes will consist of a patent earillon machine, with three interchangeable barrels, each barrel playing seven tunes, or a total in all of twenty-one tunes, divided as follows: -An English barrel, with seven English airs; a Scotch barrel, with seven Sootch sirs; and an Irish barrel, with seven Irish sirs. There will thus be an English week, a Scotch week, and an Irish week. The barrels are so arranged that on Sundays a sacred tune will always be played.
